

GABOON ADDERS UNDER THREAT

1950

During the 1950's Gaboon adders were widespread in rainforests and woodlands throughout Central Africa, Zimbabwe, Mozambique and Northeast KwaZulu-Natal.

2000

By the year 2000, many forests had been destroyed for timber, and had also been cleared for development. The number of Gaboon adders declined because of this.

2050

Who knows what the future holds...
